You Can Do It!
Adding physical activity to your life is a key to healthy living. Adults need at least 150 minutes a week of moderate activity (like brisk walking) or 75 minutes of vigorous activity (like jogging). Muscle strengthening activities (like weight training or yoga) are important to include twice per week. It may be hard to be physically active, but don't give up. There are things you can do to help keep you on track.

Challenges	Solution
"I don't have time"	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Physical activity can be done in smaller amounts of time throughout the day. Break up your activity into smaller chunks and you can still reach your goal.
"It's boring"	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Invite friends to join in. The best physical activity is the kind you enjoy and want to do. Mix it up! Change the types of activities you do.
"I don't have energy or motivation"	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Be active during the time of day when you have the most energy. Being active will actually give you more energy. Set goals you can reach to keep you on track.
"My family needs me"	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Play active games with your children or walk around the neighborhood.

Physical Activity for the Family
Doing physical activity can be a fun way to get the family moving and spend time together! Leading by example and being a good role model will help your children be more active. Being active as a family will help children learn healthy habits that will last a lifetime.

- Make physical activity a family habit. Before you know it, physical activity will become part of your daily routine. Walk to school together or take the family for a walk after dinner.
- Play together. Plan time at the park instead of going to a movie. Playing together as a family is fun for everyone.
- Limit screen time. Set a two-hour time limit per day for TV and video games. Ask your children to help with dinner or play an active game instead of sitting in front of a screen.
- Set a family goal. Start with a goal your family can reach, like walking after dinner at least three nights a week. Include your children in the weekly planning and goal setting. Allowing them to help make decisions will motivate them to reach the goal.

Healthy Eating Tips for Active Families

- Save time by slicing vegetables. Store sliced vegetables in the fridge and serve on their own or with dips like hummus or low-fat plain yogurt.
- Swap out the sugar. Keep healthier foods handy to help kids limit cookies, candy and chips between meals.
- Fruits are a quick and easy snack. Fresh, frozen and canned fruits can be easy grab-and-go options with little prep time. Offer whole fruit or choose fruits packed in 100% juice or water.
- Drink water instead of sugary drinks to cut extra calories. Drinking plenty of water is important for an active lifestyle, especially in Arizona. If you're thirsty, reach for water.

"My family loves being active. We spend time together as a family and are being healthy at the same time!"

Getting Your Physical Activity

Regular physical activity is one of the most important things you can do for your health. Older adults need at least 150 minutes of moderate activity (like brisk walking) or 75 minutes of vigorous activity (like jogging) per week. If possible, spread your physical activity throughout the week.

Healthy Aging with Physical Activity

Varying the types of physical activity is the key to keeping your body healthy. Aerobic activity makes the heart beat faster and makes the body move more than usual. Muscle-strengthening activities make muscles work more than usual and work best if done at least twice per week. Some of the health benefits of regular physical activity include:

- Being able to live on your own
- Reducing the risk of fractured bones
- Helping to control joint swelling and pain due to arthritis
- Possibly reducing blood pressure

Be Active Your Way

Physical activity does not need to be hard. Start with shorter bouts of activity at a time (at least 10 minutes) and slowly build up. Some physical activity is better than none and any amount of activity has health benefits. The important thing is to do activities that are right for you and your abilities.

Aerobic Activities (150 minutes per week)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Walking • Jogging • Swimming • Gardening • Tennis • Bicycle riding (stationary or on a path)
Muscle-Strengthening Activities (2 days per week)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Exercise bands • Hand weights • Household chores or yard work • Carrying groceries • Yoga • Balance training

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) provides nutrition assistance to people with low income. It can help you buy nutritious foods for a better diet. To find out more, contact 1-800-332-8282, AUNT S-16.

Be Safe While Being Active

Physical activity can be safe for everyone, no matter your age. What can you do if you want to be active and safe? The best steps to reduce risk or injury during physical activity are:

- Be as active as possible to increase your fitness level
- Start out with low levels of activity, go slow, and work your way up
- Drink water before, during, and after you are active
- Wear the right shoes and clothing that allow free movement

Healthy Eating as You Age

Healthy foods can give you the energy you need to live an active life with friends and family. Here are some things to keep in mind to help choose healthy foods and drinks:

- As you age, you may not feel as thirsty. Drink water often. Fat-free or low-fat (1%) milk and 100% juice can also count.
- Add sliced vegetables and fruits to your meals and snacks. Look for pre-sliced vegetables and fruits on sale if slicing and chopping are hard for you.
- Include a variety of colored vegetables and fruits to brighten your plate. Most vegetables are low in calories.
- Changes in your teeth and gums can make it harder to chew foods like vegetables, fruits or meat. Try cooked vegetables or fruits, low-sodium soups, and canned tuna or chicken to help you get the nutrition you need.
- Add flavor to foods with spices and herbs instead of salt. Look for low-sodium packaged foods.

New public awareness initiative promotes physical activity in Arizona

Put a Little Play Into Your Day

PHOENIX - The Arizona Department of Health Services is encouraging families across the state to increase daily physical activity with a new public awareness campaign. The initiative called "Put a Little Play Into Your Day" highlights simple, fun, and free or low-cost activities families can do together to stay physically active.

"Regular physical activity is one of the most important things we can do to improve our overall health," said Dr. Cara Christ, director of the Arizona Department of Health Services. "Physical activity can help you control your weight, improve your mood, and reduce your risk of chronic diseases like heart disease, diabetes, and cancer."

The "Put a Little Play Into Your Day" public awareness campaign launches statewide on May 2 and is part of the Arizona Nutrition Network, which provides nutrition education and obesity prevention programs for Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program recipients and other eligible low-income individuals. The activities support the goals of the Arizona Health Improvement Plan in promoting healthy people and healthy communities.

Campaign materials may be found on the Arizona Nutrition Network's website www.eatwellbewell.org. Once there you will find healthy recipes, online games for kids, and tips for how to be more physically active. The Arizona Nutrition Network works to increase access to healthier foods, promote active living, improve nutrition and physical activity in schools, and enhance practices in early care and education programs to impact the health of preschool children.

Arizona Nutrition Network services are provided statewide by partners including the University of Arizona Cooperative Extension, county health departments, school districts, tribal communities, after-school programs, food banks, community health centers, city governments, and non-profit community organizations.

"We're excited to launch this new public awareness campaign and bring more awareness to the fun and easy ways families can be more physically active together," said Dr. Christ. "We all have busy lives, and showing fun ways that families can stay active together is an important component of this new campaign. I encourage everyone to visit the Arizona Nutrition Network online at www.eatwellbewell.org to learn how easy it can be to incorporate physical activity our daily routines."
